The claimed invention

The present invention solves the problem that the base station does not managing the radio resources according to load situation in the transport network.

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: US5678178 A

D2: WO0232174 A1

D3: US5844886 A

D4: TOLLI A. ET AL.: 'Performance evaluation of common radio resource management (CRRM)' IEEE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON COMMUNICATIONS, 2002. ICC 2002 vol. 5, 28 April 2002 - 02 May 2002, NEW YORK, NY. USA, pages 3429 - 3433.

D1 relates to a mobile communications network where base transceiver stations and higher-level network elements are connected to nodes of a SDH network for dynamic establishment of digital transmission links. The network management of the SDH network is capable of dynamic allocation of transmission capacity of the transmission network to base transceiver stations or higher-level network elements according to their traffic load, (abstract).

D2 discloses base station controllers and the radio network controllers connected to a common radio resource manager CRRM. The CRRM controls the features of radio resource management relating to multiple cells.

D3 reveals a system for and method of network management under traffic overload.

Supplemental Box

In case the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient.

Continuation of: BOX V

D4 describes common radio resource management (CRRM) for traffic management, abstract.

Reasoned statement

None of the cited documents disclose the solution of the present invention: the base station adjusts the radio capacity information based on the transport capacity.

Neither does the cited prior art give any indication that would lead a person skilled in the art to the claimed method of and system for managing the radio resources. Therefore, the claimed invention is not obvious to a person skilled in the art.

Accordingly, the invention defined in claims 1- 28 is novel and is considered to involve an inventive step. The invention is industrially applicable.
